POETRY.

YOUNG GRIMES.

BY B. P. SHILABER.

Old Grimes is dead—that good old man.
We ne'er shall see him more,
But he has left a son who bears,
That name that old Grimes bore.

He wears a coat of latest cut,
His hat is fine and gay;
He cannot bear to view distress,
So turns from it away.

His pants are gaiters—fitting snug
O'er patent leather shoes.
His hair is by a barber curled—
He smokes cigars and chews.

A chain of massive gold is borne
His clothes are better every day,
Than were old Grimes' best

In Fashion's court he constant walks,
Where he delight doth shed;
His hands are white and very soft,
But softer is his head.

He is six feet tall—no post more straight—
His teeth are pearly white;
In habits he is sometimes loose,
And sometimes very tight.

His manners are of sweetest grace,
His voice of sweetest tone;
His diamond pin's the very one
That old Grimes used to own.

His moustache adorns his face,
His neck a scarf of blue;
He sometimes goes to church for change,
And sleeps in Grime's pew.

He sports the fastest "cab" in town,
Is always quick to bet;
He never knows who's President,
But thinks "Old Tip" is yet.

He has drank wines of every kind,
And liquors cold and hot;
Young grimes, in short, is just that sort
Of man—old Grimes was not.

A TROUBLED HONEYMOON.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA.

"She's probably already in the train, sir," said a ticket agent of whom he made inquiry. "You are going to Buffalo, I think you said; that's the train to Buffalo; you'll be likely to find her there. Just starting, not a moment to lose."

George grasped the railing of the hind car as it flew by, and flinging the door open, he rushed through car after car, but seeking in vain for Katie. She was not on the train. "Most likely she got on the wrong train and went by Groton," said the conductor. "Groton is a way station fifteen miles further ahead. We stop there fifteen or twenty minutes for refreshments.—You'll doubtless find her there."

The cars flew over the track. George mentally blessed the man who invented steam engines—he could reach Katie so much sooner. Dear little thing! how vexed and troubled she must be—and George grew quite lachrymose over her desolate condition.

But it seemed ages to George before they whirled up to the platform at Groton, and then he did not wait to practice any courtesy. He leaped out impetuously, knocking over an old lady with a flower pot and a bird cage in her hand, demolishing the pot and putting the birds into hysterics. The old lady was indignant, and hit George a rap with her umbrella that spoiled forever the fair proportions of his bridal beaver, but he was too much engaged in thought of his lost bride to spare a regret for his hat.

He flew through the astonished crowd, mashing up a crinoline here, and knocking over a small boy there, until he reached the clerk of the station. Yes, the clerk believed there was one lady who had come alone; she had gone to the Belvidere House, thought he be the one.

George waited to hear no more. He hurried up the street to the place, where the landlord assured him that no lady of Katie's style had arrived; perhaps she had stopped at Margate, ten miles back. George seized on the hope. There was no train to Margate until the next morning, but the wretched husband could not wait all night, he would walk.

He got the directions about the roads; was told that it was a straight one, for the most of the way through the woods, rather lonesome but quite pleasant. He set forth at once, not stopping to swallow a mouthful. Excitement had taken away his appetite. The fine day had developed into a cloudy evening, the night would be darker than usual.

George hastened on, too much excited to feel fatigue, too much agonized about Katie to notice that he had split his elegant French gaiters out at the sides.

After three or four hours hard walking he began to think that something must be wrong. He ought to be approaching the suburbs of Margate. In fact, he ought to have reached the village itself some time before. He grew a little doubtful about his being on the right road, and began to look about him. There was no road at all, or rather, it was all road; for all vestige of fences and wheel tracks had vanished, there was forest, forest everywhere.

The very character of the ground beneath his feet changed at every step he took. It grew softer and softer, until he sank ankle deep in mud; and, suddenly, before he could turn about, he fell in almost to his armpits. He had stumbled into a quagmire! A swift horror came over him! People had died before now in places like this, and it would be dreadful to die thus, and Katie never know what had become of him. He struggled with the strength of desperation to free himself, but he might as well have taken it coolly. He was held fast.

Thus slowly the hours wore away. The night was ages long. The sun had never taken so much time to rise in; but probably it realized that nothing could be done until it was up, and was not disposed to hurry.

As soon as it was fairly light, George began to scream at the top of his voice, in the hope that some one who might be going some where might hear him. He amused himself in this way for an hour; and at the end of that time you could not have distinguished his voice from that of a frog close at hand, who had been doing his best to rival our hero.

At last, just as George was beginning to despair, he heard a voice in the distance calling out—

"Hallo, there! is it you or a frog?"

"It's me," cried George, "and I shall be dead in ten minutes! Come quick! I'm into the mud up to my eyes!"

Directly an old woman appeared, a sunbonnet on her head and a basket on her arm. She was huckleberrying.

"The land sake," cried she, "you are in for it, ain't ye?"

"Sarved ye right! I'm glad of it! Didn't ye see the notice that the old man put up, that nobody must come a huckleberrying in this ere swamp?"

"Huckleberrying!" exclaimed George angrily. "You must think a fellow was beside himself to come into the jungle, if he knew it! Huckleberrying, indeed! I am after my wife!"

"Land sake! Your wife! Well, of all things. I declare I never!"

"She got on the wrong train, and so did I; and I expect she is at Marggte, and I started from Groton last night to walk there, and lost my way. Help me out, do, that's a dear woman."

The old woman steadied herself by a tree, and being a woman of good muscles, she soon drew George out—mud from head to foot. He shook himself.

"There, if you'll show me the way, I'll go right on—"

"No you won't either! You'll go right over to our house and have a cup of coffee and something to eat, and a suit of the old man's clothes to put on while I dry yours; and I will send Tom over to Margate with the horse and wagon to bring your wife."

"You're a trump," cried George wringing her hand. "God bless you! You shall be well rewarded for your kindness."

Mrs. Stark's house was only a little way distant, and to its shelter she took George. Tom was dispatched to Margate to hunt up Mrs. Jameson; and George arrayed in a suit of Mr. Stark's clothes—blue swallow tailed coat, home made gray pantaloons, cow hide boots, and white hat with broad brim—for the Starks were Friends—felt like a new man.

They gave him a good breakfast, which did not come amiss; and while Tom was absent, the old lady made him lie down on the lounge and take a nap.

Tom returned about noon. He had scoured the whole village, but found nothing. Only one passenger had left the train at Margate the previous day, and he was an old man with patent plasters for sale.

Poor George was frenzied. He rushed out of the house and stood looking first up and then down the road, uncertain which way to wend his course. Suddenly the train from Groton swept past, and a white handkerchief was swinging from an open window, and above the handkerchief George caught the gleam of golden hair and blue ribbons! It was Katie beyond a doubt. He cleared the fence at a bound, and rushed after the flying train. He ran till he was ready to drop, when he came upon some men with a hand car, who were repairing the road. He gave them ten dollars to Groton. He was sure he could find Katie there!

But no! The train had not stopped at all. This was the express for Buffalo. But a bystander informed him a lady answering the description he gave of Katie had been seen the day before at Danville, crying, and saying she had lost her husband.

George darted off. He caught with avidity at the hope thus held out. It must be Katie! Who else had lost her husband?

A train was just leaving for Danville. He sprang on board, and suffered an eternity during the transit, for it was an accommodation train, and everybody knows about those horrible delays at every station.

But they reached Danville at last. George enquired for the lady who had lost her husband. Yes, she was all right. She had gone to the American House to wait for him. She expected him by every train, till he came, said the ticket master.

He hurried with all speed to the American.

Yes, she was there, said the clerk; she was waiting for her husband; 221 room, right hand, second flight.

George flew up stairs, burst open the door of 221, and entered without ceremony. She was sitting by the window looking for him, with her back to the door. He sprang forward, and holding her in his arms, rained kisses upon her face.

"My Katie! my darling! my darling! have I found you at last?"

She turned her face and looked at him before she spoke, and then she set up such a scream as made the very hair stand on George's head.

"You are not my James," she cried. Oh, heaven! Help! help! Somebody come quickly! Help! help! murder! thieves!"

George stood aghast. The lady was middle-aged, with false teeth, and a decidedly snuffy looking nose. No more like the charming little Katie than she was like the Venus de Medici!

He turned to flee just as the stairway was alive with people alarmed by the cries of the woman. They tried to stop him, but he would not be stayed. He took the stairs at a leap, and landed somewhere near the bottom, among the wreck of three chambermaids, and as many white-aproned waiters.

And before any one could seize him he was rushing down the front steps. A lady and gentleman were slowly ascending them, and George in his mad haste, ran against the lady and broke the rim of her bonnet.

"You rascal!" cried the gentleman with her, "what do you mean by treating a lady in this manner?" and he seized our hero by the collar.

Then, for the first time George looked at the couple before him.

"'Tis Katie! Oh, Katie!" cried he, for this time there was no mistake; it was Katie and her uncle Charles.—"Oh, my wife! my wife!"

He tried to take her in his arm, but she fled from him in terror.

"Take that dreadful man away," she cried. "I am sure he is insane or drunk! Only see his boots and his awful hat!"

"I tell you I am your own George. Oh, Katie, where have you been?" he exclaimed.

Katie looked at him now, and recognizing him, began to cry.

"Oh, dear! that I should have ever lived to see this day! My George that I thought so pure and good, faithless and intoxicated! Oh, uncle Charles, what will become of me?"

"My dear niece, be patient," said her uncle. "I think this is George, and we will hear what he has to say before condemning him. Mr. Jameson, I met your wife in the cars yesterday, and she informed me that you had deserted her at the Windham depot. Of course I could not believe that your absence was intentional. I telegraphed to the principal stations along the road for information of you. Why did I receive no answer?"

"Because the telegraph does not run into old Mr. Stark's huckleberry swamp, where I had the honor of spending last night," said George, losing his temper.

"But this extraordinary disguise?"

"My clothes were muddy, and I have on Mr. Stark's," said George. And though the explanation was not particularly lucid to those who heard it, they were satisfied.

"My dearest George!" cried Katie, rushing into his arms, "and so you did not desert me, and I shan't have to be divorced?"

"Never, my darling! and we will never be separated again for a moment.

"No, not for all the baggage in the world! Oh, George you do not know how I have suffered.

The crowd could be kept ignorant no longer, for scores had assembled round the hotel, drawn thither by the disturbance. Matters were explained, and cheers long and loud rent the air.

The landlord got up an impromptu wedding dinner, at which Katie presided; and George looking very sheepish in Mr Stark's swallow-tail, did the honors.

They proceeded on their tour next day, and soon after Mr. and Mrs. Stark were delighted to receive a box by express, containing the lost suit of the old gentleman, and the wherewithal to purchase him another, beside the most handsome drawn silk bonnet for Mrs. Stark, that the old lady had ever seen.

"There, old man," said she, turning from the glass at which she had been surveying herself in the new bonnet, "I allers told you that hucklebrry swamp would turn to something if it was only to raise frogs in. Guess I hit it sometimer."

Temperance—Honest Confessions.

The first meeting of the Congressional Temperance Society was held to-night, in the Representative hall. The galleries were densely crowded. Senator Wilson presided. Representative Price, of Iowa, said he had never witnessed a scene like that before him, of so much brilliancy and so full of interest. The chairman next introduced, in complimentary terms, Senator Yates. Mr. Yates said he had signed the pledge for good, and had made his covenant with God some months before, when he signed the pledge. He raised himself to his full height for he was free. Although he had considered himself a moderate rindker it was published throughout the land that he was a drunkard. There was some truth and error in this. He had failings when drunk of letting everybody know it. His speeches were not frequent, but long, and the great commonwealth of Illinois had for twenty-five years honored him in all public positions and he had now promised that state and all who loved him, Kate and the children, that he would never more touch, taste or handle the unclean thing. He intended to fight it out on that line, till the last hour of his existence.

In conclusion he read a cheering and joyous letter from his wife in response to the good news that he had signed the pledge, which moved many in the audience to tears. Several others addressed the meeting, and in response to calls from the audience a pledge was read and names of signers, embracing a number of Senators and Representatives.

"The Number of the Beast is 666."

This prophetic number has been very fruitful of discussion among the students of prophecy for several centuries. Both the Hebrews and Greeks used letters to represent numbers, and not figures. The letters in the name—Cesar of Rome—foot up 666, both in Hewbrew and Greek. Dr. Cumming, of London, thinks he finds its fulfillment in Napoleon, as the representative of the Roman race. But Dr. Cumming has a rival. A writer in a Roman Catholic paper proves that the Prussian prime minister, "whose real name," for the time being is asserted to be "Bismarck," is the true owner of the number 666. Any one can add it up for himself: B—2, I—10, S—200, T—300, M—30, A—1, R—90, C—3, K—20. He is also the Little Horn; in short, not being king, he is plucking up the ten kingdoms of the Holy Roman Empire (i. e., Germany). Daniel viii, 24, strikingly applies to him, the destroyer of the people; and the fire from heaven which Antichrist is to bring down finds its clear and sufficient antitype in the needle gun.

A REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.—A Republican State Convention, to nominate a candidate for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and two Regents of the University, will be held at the city of Lansing, on Thursday, March 7th, 1867, at 11 o'clock, A. M. The several counties will send two delegates for each Representative in the lower branch of the State Legislature; and every organized county having no Representative will be entitled to one delegate.

President Finney, of Oberlin, lately prayed for the President: "Oh Lord, if thou canst manage him, without crushing him, spare him; otherwise crush him!" This reminded the Rochester Union of a preacher who prayed for an unjust neighbor: "Oh Lord, take John Smith by the slack of his breeches, and shake him over hell; but don't drop him in!"

Theodore Tilton, on the morning after his lecture in Lansing, had an interview with the legislature of Michigan, for the purpose of urging the members to throw open the doors of Michigan University to women as well as to men. There is some hope that this most famous of Western universities will be reconstructed on a just and generous foundation of equal privileges to both sexes. Many of the younger Western colleges are conducted on such a plan, and are abundantly successful. It is the best plan.

A QUESTION.—A friend asks us to tell him the origin of the phrase "catawampously chawed up," credited lately by Mr. Tilton to Frederick Douglass. He thinks Mr. D. cannot be the author of the phrase, for he remembers that, some thirty years ago, while a scholar in an institution wherein boys and girls recited together, but were not permitted any intercourse beyond that of the class-room, he received from a friend a poetic epistle, in which it was thus incorporated:

"O may those dire 'Blue Laws,' which now interpose,
And frowningly threat very friends and not foes,
Be repealed or suspended, or, what is far better,
'Catawampously chawed up' to the very last letter!"

We confess our inability to answer our friend's question.

The magnificence of Mr. George Peabody's gift of over two millions of dollars for the mental and moral improvement of the youth of the Southern States deprives the epithet "princely" of all its meaning. Republican magnificence must henceforth be the descriptive suggestion of liberality. This is the largest gift for any purpose ever made by a single individual. It somehow accords with our natural and justifiable national conceit in our rivers, our lakes, and our mountains. To make enlightened men of the destitute and the ignorant, to provide by gigantic generosity against future internal strife with far more security than war or legislative enactment can establish, and to be remembered with the fervent gratitude of those who are made permanently happy and nobly prosperous by mental and moral culture, is a privilege that Mr. Peabod has thus signally attained.

The Ypsilanti Commercial PUBLISHED WEEKLY, BY
C. R. PATTISON.

Current Events.

The Sixth Annual meeting of the Cane Growers Association was held at Tecumseh. Our friend Mr. B. Moore was present, and we hope to have a report from him. Mr. M. is one of the most enthusiactic cane growers in this region. It was predicted at this association, that sorghum would yet become one of the staple crops in Michigan. Next week we will give the most interesting suggestions.

The Wool Growers Association at Ann Arbor was very interesting. After an earnest discussion, several rules were then adopted, which we will publish in the agricultural column next week.

The visit of Gen. Hooker and Staff, Gen. Morrow, and others, to the University at Ann Arbor, was a very pleasant social affair. But not very productive in pecuniary results to the Monument association, which was the main object in view.

CONGRESS.

Both Houses finally agreed upon the following Reconstruction Programme. The rebel states are divided into Military Districts. It is the duty of the President to assign to the command of each district an officer not below a Brigadier General with a sufficient force to protect all persons in their rights. When civil courts will execute law they are left free to do it. When they will not, the military steps in. Whenever any rebel state shall have organized a government in conformity with the Constitution, and been ratified by a majority of the legal voters of whatever race or color, and such State Constitution provide for universal suffrage of the loyal population, and shall have adopted the Constitutional amendment now before the States for ratification, such State shall be entitled to representation in Congress. The present State governments are declared provisional only, and can be blotted out or modified any time at the option of Congress. We like this bill. It will be ratified by the people.

Senator Chandler has made a speech denouncing the Sec. of Treasury in unmeasured terms. Three vetoes are supposed to be at hand. Military Reconstruction bill—Louisana billl—and Office Tenure bill.

The Senate has made a fearful slaughter of Johnson's Office holders in Michigan.

Veto.

The Governor has vetoed the bill to allow the towns on the route of the proposed rail road from Port Huron & Flint to Lansing, to tax themselves for its benefit. For the same reason of his former veto—unconstitutional—an unbearable burden and endless and vexatious taxation, and leading to numberless evils to the people.

The Normal Company Re-Union.

The readers of the COMMERCIAL will remember a call published a few weeks ago for a social re-union of Com. E, (Normal Company) 17th Mich.

The pleasant affair came off on Wednesday, Feb 13, at the residence of Dr. N. Webb, a few miles out of the city. The day was one of the most unpleasant days of the season. In fact one more so could hardly have been found during the whole winter. Notwithstanding the rain, at the appointed hour, the "Boys" began to collect at the Follett House, and the morning trains bringing a number, it was soon evident that storm alone would not prevent the gathering.

The Doctor kindly furnished transportation in the shape of a large family sleigh with seats around the sides, and Hadley as driver.

The storm holding up for a time, we were soon on the road. Arriving at the Doctor's residence, we were very warmly welcomed, and after interchanging congratulations, were bidden to make ourselves generally at home, and proceed to business at once—to business meant, to general enjoyment. At roll call the following named persons answered, "Here," W. H. Bearsley, M. J. Breming, Gregory E. Dibble, P. V. Fellows, George W. Harrison, D. S. Howard, John Horning, George H. Hopkins, C. H. Jones, Thomas Mathews, J. S. Maltman, J. A. McDougal, R. A. Parker, Delos Phillips, W. H. Russell, A. F. Wilcox, Hadley Webb, John L. Yaw. Letters were read from some of the absent ones.

Every member of the Co. was either "Present or accounted for." Some one of those present being able to account for the absent ones, telling their whereabouts, business occupations, marriage relations, etc.

The experience of these present embracing nearly a score of battles; they had campaigned it under Gens. McClellan, Burnside, Hooker, Grant, Dix, Sherman, Schofield, Foster and Meade.

Had buried comrades in seven of the Southern States, reaching from Washington to Vicksburg. Ten were able to show honorable scars. Four had tasted the sweets of rebel prison life. Three only acknowledged themselves as belonging to the married state. Some others seemed to have flattering prospects.

After a few hours thus happily spent in recounting past hardships and privations of prison life and escape, the call, "Fall in for rations" greeted us. We gathered around the festive board and the inner man was feasted upon the good of the sea and land. Such oysters, better ones we did not find even as we gathered them ourselves from the briny shores at Newport News in March of '63. And fowls the like of which never were confiscated, even in the heart of the rebellion, than graced the Doctor's table. Coffee and dainties are rarely as well prepared, as were those we were bidden to feast upon. A rare dinner indeed for soldier boys. Camp songs, solos, quartetts and speeches followed the dinner.

The following resolutions were then adopted.

Whereas On this the first occasion of meeting of the surviving members of our late Com., we can but remember the places made vacant by causualities of battle, while we ever cherish their names as dear brothers. And

Whereas The tender care of our wounded, by Dr. N. Webb, after the terrible battles of South Mountain, and Antietam, and his interest ever manifested in our welfare, whether in danger or in peace, will never be forgotten.

Resolved That while we cherish the memory of those fallen brothers, we can but offer grateful acknowledgements to the God of battles, that so many of us are spared to live over again the campaign marches and battles in which they were common sufferers with us.

[2] Resolved That the thanks of the members of Co. "E" 17th Mich, are due to Dr. N. Webb, for the very interesting occasion which we have this day enjoyed at his hands.

[3] Resolved That we recommend an annual reunion of members of our late Company.

Resolved That in all future reunions of the Co., Dr. Webb and family be considered as members of the Co., and cordially invited to attend all such gatherings.

Messrs. Maltman, Brearsley and Hopkins were appointed a committee to carry out the object of the 3d resolution. (It is desired that members inform either of the committee, at Ypsilanti, of any changes in Post Office address, or of any suggestions they may wish to make in regrrd to the time and place of the next reunion.

It was a visit such as old soldiers gathered together, only can enjoy.

The only thing to mar the pleasure of the day, was the rembrance of the comrades who had fallen. The memory of Fred, a son of the Doctor, who died of wounds recieved at Antietam, was dear to us all, and as we looked at his picture—taken after he received his wound—hanging on the wall, that mark on his forehead brought clearly to us the memory of that day, his fate, and that of others, and as we thought many an eye moistened.

The Company returned to the city in the early part of the evening.—Those that remained in town were invited to spend the evening at the residence of Prof. Miller. The Professor was not at home, but in the person of Mrs. Miller was found one whose whole soul is hospitality. The pleasure of the evening was a happy close of the day.

The hospitable Prof. Ripley and Lady, entertained those of the Com. who were in town on Tuesday eve. Though few were there, the gathering was an exceedingly pleasant one, and the table would have done honor to a princely gathering. It is expected that at the next reunion an address will be delivered by some member of the Co. and other arrangements made suitable for the occasion.

Room for the Insane.

The following letter from the Medical Superintendant of our Insane Asylum will explain itself. We call the attention of all the people, and especially of all the members of our Legisture to it.

MICH. ASYLUM, KALAMAZOO,
Feb. 14, 1867.

MISS:—It would give me very great pleasure, were it in my power to afford you the relief desired. Our institution, however, is very crowded; and since the 1st. of Dec. last, rather more than two months we have refused forty applications for admission. On Monday, we were obliged to refuse application for the admission of a lady from Grand Rapids, now at "Brigham Hall", and I have just written a refusal to friends at Bellville, Wayne Co., who wish us to receive a young man in the same institutions. It is very natural that the eastern asylums should charge roundly for the care of patients from other States, and we should not complain.

Eight years, or rather nine years ago, we called attention to the fact that this very state of things must occur, in the natural course of events.—The public have not seconded our efforts at all, or to any effective degree. And I presume that not one single person of the two hundred who have made unsuccessful application since Jan. 1st 1866, will deem it worth their while, even to take the trouble to write their Representatives at Lansing much less render us any assistance in securing the completion of this Asylum. Six or eight years after this Asylum was established, its plan was adopted in an Eastern State, the building has been finished five years, and within the present month I have sent two of our citizen there, who besides the great expense of traveling so great a distance, are paying $10 per week for treatment. Its Medical Supt., at the same time admitting that the Michigan Asylum is its superior in every respect. Their first appropriation $240,000—ours for 1862 and '63 $25,000, and 1864 and '65—$29,000. We have only one wing fully completed, and in it to-day are 57 patients beyond its capacity.

Sincerely regretting a necessity which forces us to add to an affliction already severe enough.

I am yours very truly,

E. H. VAN DEUSEN,
Med. Supt.

Two hundred patients refused admission to our insane asylum in one year for the want of room! This is a sad and terrible state of things. Who can tell how much unnecessary misery has been caused by it. If any classes of persons appeal to our sympathy, and have a right to command our active benevolence, it is the insane.

Is the parsimony which keeps these unfortunate persons at large, and deprive them of the treatment which might restore them to reason, a necessity? If not it is a crime.

Is it a fact the sane people of this State, are too poor or too few to provide for the insane? If so we had better appeal to other States for aid.

Now the truth is we are abundantly able to make all necessary provision for this unfortunate class of persons, and the people of the State desire that suitable appropriations should be made by the Legislature, for this object.

In behalf of thousands who sympathize with this afflicted portion of our fellow citizens. I desire respectfully to call the attention of the Legislature to this subject, and hope it will receive the consideration it deserves.

STATE OF MICHIGAN.

No 140.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

[INTRODUCED BY MR. JENNESS.]

LANSING, February 8, 1867.

A BILL

To regulate the Manner of Electing Trustees composing the District Board of School District Number Four, in the City and Township of Ypsilanti, and to Define the Qualifications of Electors therefor.

SECTION 1. The People of the State of Michigan enact, That the president and secretary of the district board of school district number four, in the city and township of Ypsilanti, or in case of their inability to act, such other two members of said board as said board shall designate, shall constitute a board of inspectors, for the purpose of conducting the annual election of trustees of said district.

SEC. 2 Said board of inspectors shall, before opening the polls, appoint two suitable persons to act as clerks of the election, and each of said clerks, so appointed, shall take the constitutional oath of office which oath either of said inspectors may administer; and each inspector and clerk so appointed, shall receive two dollars for his services at said election, to be paid by the treasurer of said board.

SEC. 3 The said board of inspectors shall provide a ballot-box, at the expense of said district, and open the polls at such place as the district may designate, (by giving public notice, as required by law,) for the election of two trustees, whose term of office shall be for three (3) years, as now provided by law. Said polls shall be opened at eight o'clock in the forenoon, or as soon thereafter as may be, on the day of the annual meeting, and shall continue open until four (4) o'clock in the afternoon.

SEC. 4. The qualifications of electors at said election shall be the same as now provined by chapter 78, of the compiled laws, except as hereafter provided, and the electors shall vote by ballot, and each person offering to vote shall deliver his ballot, folded, to one of the inspectors, in the presence of the board, who shall deposit the same unopened in the ballot-box.

SEC. 5. If any person offering to vote at such election shall be chalanged as unqualified by any legal voter in said district, one of said inspectors shall declare to the person so challenged the qualifications of a voter, and if such person shall state that he is qualified, and the challenge shall not be withdrawn, the said inspector shall tender him an oath, in substance as follows: "You do solmenly swear (or affirm] that you are 51 years of age—that you are an actual resident of this school district, and liable to pay a school distriet therein on assessed property," And any person taking such oath shall be permitted to vote at such election.

SEC. 6. If any person so challenged shall refuse to take such oath, his vote shall be rejected; and any person who shall willfully take a false oath, or make a false affirmation, under the provisions of the preceding section, shall be deemed guilty of perjury.

SEC. 7 Each of the clerks of the election shall keep a poll list, which shall contain the names of all the electors voting at such election, and at the close of the polls, the inspectors and clerks shall immediately proceed to canvass and ascertain the result of the election, which canvass shall be public, and the two persons found to have received the largest number of votes at such election, shall be deemed duly elected trustees.

SEC. 8. The annual meeting for the transaction of the business of the said district, other than the election of trustees, shall be held as heretofore.

SEC. 9. All acts or parts of acts contravening the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

A Feat.

Messrs. *H*ariman and Phillips of our city preformed an intricate feat at Cornwell & Co's paper mill last week. The water wheel became clogged by a piece of wood. Encased in their armor they went down under the wheel and removed the obstruction. The water was at its height and pieces of timber and ice were driven along under and around the wheel. It was a dangerous job, but admirably done. The proprietors had fears that the mill would be idle some time, but by the skill of the above parties aided by science the mill is now in running order.

The infant class did nobly.

PEAT IN MICHIGAN.

In a letter recently received from Professor A. Winchell, of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, he says:—

"I have not been unobservant of your efforts for a few years back to introduce machinery that should enable us to utilize the vast deposits of peat existing in various parts of our country. I have anticipated that the time would arrive when the existing deposits of the lower peninsula of Michigan would come into requisition.

"I am induced to think that the time has now arrrived. Cordwood commands, throughout the southern portion of the State, not less than five to eight dollars per cord; and the coal which is worked at Jackson and Corrunna and other points, though obtainable for three or four dollars per ton, is not of quality suitable for domestic use. In this state of things, we are introducing coal from Pennsylvania,—Scranton, Lackawany, and Lehigh,—at twelve to thirteen dollars per ton delivered. This coal is cheaper than cord-wood; but its use in-involves an unreasonable expense, as long as we have, within the limits of every county of the State, a deposit of combustible matter sufficient in extent to supply the wants of the people for a long time, provided we have the means for effecting its inexpensive desiccation and preparation for use.

"The peat-beds of the State were described in a general way in the Geological Reports made by Dr. Houghton and his assistants, thirty years ago.

"Eleven years ago I published an account of them in the Michigan Farmer, then edited in Detroit. In 1860, I made further mention of them in my Reports on the progress of the Geological Survey; and in January 1865, in an address before the Legislature, at Lansing (also published by the Legislature), on the "Soils and sub-soils of Michigan," I again made reference to the subject.

"In none of these documents, however, are our peat accumulations described in detail. The notices embraced in the Geological Reports are general and hasty, such as would be suited to reports of progress only. No final Report has ever been made, and hence no opportunity offered to record the numerous details of which observations have been taken.

"The facts are, however that few States in the Union afford so extensive accumulations, or so fine a quality of combustible muck and peat.

"I cannot now specify many of these accumulations of peat, neither is it necessary. I know of very extensive beds in Washtenaw, Jackson, and Lenawee Counties. I have not made special explorations of many of these beds. There has been no occasion for it.

"Whenever the time arrives for drawing upon these stores of fuel, local observations can be made, and measurements of depth and tests of quality undertaken.

"You seem to incline to the opinion that the peat deposits in Michigan are rather thin, and not of very good quality. In this you are quite mistaken. The fact is, as I have already stated, our peat deposits are numerous, often from four to twenty feet deep, and of good quality.

"I know of some peat bogs of forty to one hundred acres in extent; In Ingham County is one of more than a thousand acres in extent; another in Lapeer County. As nearly as I can recollect, a bog occurs in Washtenaw County, one or two hundred acres in extent; another in the south part of Jackson County, fifty acres in extent.

"I am unable to say what depth the peat attains in these particular places, but I know that in many other places it is ten or fifteen feet to the bottom."

The Detroit Free Press, in a recent article says: "The discovery of immense beds of peat in Michigan, which are already being developed, and the fact that the article is now produced for commerce, is a matter of great importance to every housekeeper, as well as to the capitalist and manufacturer.

"Specimens of crude and condensed peat have been forwarded to the Board of Trade in this city, for exhibition at their rooms, by Mr. Elisha Congdon, an enterprising merchant and farmer of Chelsea, in this State. The bed from which the specimens were taken is situated in Chelsea, Washtenaw County. It is what is known as a dry bog, containing about one hundred acres, with an average depth of ten or twelve feet at least. Soundings have been made of some parts of it, giving over twenty feet, without reaching the bottom of the bed.

Professor Douglass, of the Michigan State University, after a thorough analysis, pronounced it a very superior article, yielding only three and two-tenths per cent of ash.

These beds of peat are almost inexhaustible and being found in the dry bogs, can readily be worked; and the quality of the material having been fully tested, we may expect soon to have our markets supplied with it as a regular article of traffic.

Mr. Congdon is now erecting a building in which he will place one of the Leavitt peat machines; and expects to prepare for market during the coming spring, fifteen to twenty tons per day of concentrated peat.

To what extent this traffic may reach is beyond calculation; for it is believed that throughout the State there are hundreds of peat-beds which a proper system of drainage would develop, and thus furnish an abundant supply of fuel, when the production of our forests will have become curtailed to such an extent, and its cost as fuel so enhanced, as to prohibit its use for that purpose.

We hope that the owners of the numerous peat-marshes in the county will profit by the example of Mr. Congdon."

CONSTITUTION LIFE SYRUP

Cures all Swelling of the Glands,

either of the Face, Neck, or Female Breast, and should be taken as soon as the swelling is detected, thus preventing their breaking, and producing troublesome Discharging Sores, which disfigure so many of the younger portion of the community, from six to twenty years of age. Young children are very subject to Discharges from the Ears, which depends upon a Scrofulous constitution. These cases soon recover by taking a few doses of the Life Syrup.

S

All scrofulous persons suffering from general Debility, Emaciation Dyspepsia and Dropsy of the limbs, abdomen and in the female, Dropsy of the ovaries and womb, generally accompanied with Induration and Ulceration of the Uterus, are permanently cured by Constitution Life Syrup. The disease known as Goitre or Swelled Neck, the Life Syrup will remove entirely. The remedy should be taken for some time, as the disease is exceedingly chronic and stubborn, and will not be removed without extra effort.

Tumors of the Ovaries, Tumors of the Breast, and swelling of other glands of the body, will be completely reduced without resorting to the knife, or operations of any kind.
